

SKAGEN Vekst

A Nordic and Global Equity Fund

SKAGEN Vekst is an actively managed portfolio which combines undervalued Nordic and global companies. The fund is managed by Søren Milo Christensen and Sondre Solvoll Bakketun.

Investment Strategy

Nordic countries contain some of the world's best-managed companies. Corporate governance and business practices are often market-leading while levels of protection for minority shareholders and transparency are generally very high. However, the Nordic investment universe is relatively small and the fund's broad mandate allows up to half of its assets to be invested in companies listed outside of the region. This global flexibility also helps to diversify portfolio risk away from the Nordic region.

The fund is actively managed, consistent with SKAGEN's investment philosophy. The portfolio managers are benchmark agnostic and their value-based strategy is to find attractively priced companies with clearly identifiable catalysts for a revaluation. These businesses may be out of favour (often due to short-term market noise) but where changes, either internally or in the operating environment, will improve their fundamental outlook.

The portfolio managers target companies with a margin of safety and possessing clear, coherent and realistic triggers to drive a share price re-rating. This approach creates a portfolio tilted towards classic value stocks with a focus on capital return. Holdings must have both downside protection and upside potential based on their core earnings, cash flow growth and / or cost restructuring.

Portfolio Characteristics

The concentrated portfolio typically contains 40-60 holdings with the top 35 positions representing 70-90 percent of assets. The fund has a bias towards mid / large cap companies with select high-conviction small cap ideas. The portfolio's geographic exposure is typically balanced 50:50 between Nordic stocks and those listed outside the region.

The fund managers also target diversification across different sectors in order to manage portfolio risk. The investment horizon is typically a minimum of 3-5 years but can be significantly longer as the portfolio managers attach greater value to fundamentals than short-term trends.

Investment Philosophy

SKAGEN's investment philosophy is centred on active, value-based fund management; a combination we believe ensures the best results for clients.

SKAGEN portfolio managers aim to outperform the broader stock market, enabled by unconstrained mandates and the freedom to invest with conviction in their best ideas. They are agile when selecting the companies with the greatest potential to create value and how it can be achieved. We also believe that engagement with companies is key to delivering sustainable risk-adjusted returns.

Value

All SKAGEN portfolio managers invest bottom-up by selecting the companies they believe will deliver the most value for clients. Investment decisions are based on detailed analysis and deep knowledge of companies, irrespective of their inclusion or position in an index. We strive to beat the market and create portfolios that diverge from conventional benchmarks to achieve this.

- Unconstrained: Unconstrained mandates give us the freedom to search for the best opportunities from across the globe. They also enable us to create diversified portfolios by geography, sector and investment theme to control risks for clients.
- Conviction: We are high conviction investors who build concentrated portfolios of our best ideas. We act quickly and decisively when price targets are reached, or if an investment case deteriorates, and redeploy capital into more attractive ideas to optimise the funds' returns.

Active

We invest in companies whose assets or earnings potential isn't fully reflected in their share price and take a broad view of value creation. Portfolio managers typically identify businesses with clear catalysts to correct their mispricing and those with an underappreciated ability to compound value over time.

- Agility: We often look beyond traditional metrics to uncover value hidden on company balance sheets or within revaluation triggers. Agile thinking can also lead us to businesses whose intrinsic earnings capacity or growth potential is underestimated by the market.
- Engagement: Releasing value can require engagement and patience to maximise long-term results. We are active owners and engage with our portfolio companies on key business, financial, environmental, social and governance issues, using performance indicators to drive sustainable returns and revaluation over time.

History

SKAGEN was originally founded in Stavanger, Norway in 1993 with the goal of generating long-term growth for clients' assets. From investing solely on behalf of friends and family, SKAGEN grew into a leading Scandinavian fund manager with a broad European footprint.

SKAGEN became part of Storebrand Asset Management (SAM) in 2017 and subsequently merged into SAM in November 2023. As part of the merger, SKAGEN Funds are now owned and administered by SAM which has outsourced their management to a newly established legal entity - named SKAGEN AS - an investment firm that operates as an independent boutique with its own Board.

The portfolio managers have significant co-investment in the SKAGEN Funds. This serves to align interest with clients, and SKAGEN is committed to maintaining its culture of independent thinking and high performance.
