

Performance Commentary

The earnings season has been solid across emerging markets (EM), which has continued to support inflow to EM equity funds. Samsung Electronics continues to benefit from strong market dynamics in memory while X5 Retail Group demonstrates solid growth and positive operating leverage. Hyundai Motor, on the other hand, continues to suffer from sales disruption in China and weak US demand. State Bank of India demonstrated that it has not yet finished cleaning up after the merger.

We saw increasing tension on the Korean peninsula. We would note that this is nothing new and it did not materially impact Korean equities. Three of the fund's top five contributors in August were Korean.

EM equities have delivered solid absolute and relative returns since early 2016. However, the asset class has lagged developed market equities over the past 5 years. From a valuation perspective, EM equities are still relatively attractive. With decelerating inflation and improving margins and earnings, we still see EM equities as relatively attractive. Our top 35 holdings, representing 86% of the assets, are valued at 11x earnings for 2017e versus 13x for EM in general. They are valued at only 1.1x equity versus 1.7x for our universe. We see a weighted upside of 31% for our portfolio.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies, mainly in emerging economies.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
