

Performance Commentary

Early expansion cycles including strong stimulus, inflationary tendencies and low interest rates have historically been beneficial for the real estate sector. This has been the case now in the US economy and evidenced by the US real estate market. European real estate is lagging but is likely to catch up as vaccination rates increase and reopening progresses. The best contributor to the fund's return came from the US-based data centre company Switch, as it catches up after lagging peers in first quarter. The Swedish logistics operator Catena performed well on the back of further asset acquisitions and balance sheet strengthening. The most important event in April was that the German Constitutional Court decided that rent controls are a national matter and the state of Berlin may not implement their own rent laws. This is positive for the German residential names in the portfolio. The largest detractor was Hong Kong conglomerate Far East Consortium, not due to any company-specific news. SKAGEN m2 continues to focus on investing in resilient companies in trend-driven subsegments, or companies that we consider mispriced and which will benefit from economic recovery. The long-term prospects are positive; however, real estate will not be immune to challenges caused by deterioration in the macroeconomic environment.

The fund gives access to a normally inaccessible global real estate market. The fund selects low-priced, high-quality real estate companies from around the world. The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
