Performance Commentary

Emerging market volatility returned in August, mainly as a result of the situation in Turkey. The currency dropped 32 percent versus the EUR due to uncertainty surrounding the country's economic future and lack of confidence in the government and central bank.

At the end of the month, the turmoil in Argentina increased. It was triggered by the country's president asking the IMF to speed up the release of the USD 50bn bailout package to shore up next year's budget. The peso dropped sharply on the news. SKAGEN Tellus was also affected by the EM volatility and had a weak month.

Uruguay was the weakest performer as, once again, the investment was hit by contagion from Argentina. Low liquidity led to a sharp increase in interest rates and a drop in the currency. This is not based on fundamentals but is a result of the risk off-sentiment in the region. Furthermore, the lower copper price and risk-off sentiment led to a sharp depreciation of the Chilean peso, which was negative for our Chilean investment.

We sold out of New Zealand and added to our positions in Norway and the UK in August.
