

Performance Commentary

February was a rollercoaster month for the global stock exchanges and SKAGEN Vekst. The month started with a correction, continuing the weakness from the last days of January, but quickly corrected upwards after the initial drop.

Strong performance was seen during the month in semiconductor equipment-maker Applied Materials, which rose nicely after reporting strong earnings and outlook. Vestas Wind also rose, having assuaged the worst market fears with a relatively upbeat outlook. Russian bank Sberbank and dry bulk shipping company Golden Ocean Group also performed well in the period.

There were no clear underperformers during the month, but Lonza continues to be pummelled for weak communication and guidance after Q1-reporting. Samsung also performed below par due to some concerns on the memory cycle being close to peak and OLED-orders lagging after weak iPhone X-performance so far.

The fund sold out of Swatch after the stock reached our valuation target. Of other notable transactions, the fund added to Maersk during the period, taking advantage of short-term volatility to add to a stock trading at a low valuation, attractive dividend yield and exposure to a strengthening container-market.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies in the Nordic region and from around the world.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
